

NATALIA QUEZADA

Moments in Time

A single key. The doors to my childhood are now locked forever.

There is no going back, not now, not ever.

What lies behind those doors? Memories.

A new chapter has been unlocked and I can't stop the clock.

Soon enough I will need fresh paper and pen to start writing again.

To write new journeys and adventures in the real world.

To write battles I will face and overcome.

To write my greatest accomplishments and failures.

I will not stop until I'm done. Done with fulfilling my greatest dreams.

However, I stop and think. Think how life would be for me in 20 years.

Who will I be? What will I do? Questions will rush through my body like how blood rushes down your veins when you're riding your favorite roller coaster.

Life is like a roller coaster. Bringing you through the ups and downs, twists and turns.

The ride will break down, or you will find yourself stuck. But in no time it will be up and running again.

Who knew I would grow up so fast? Time is rare and there is no time to spare. Soon I will get ready to travel on the roller coaster of a lifetime. And on that ride I will begin to grow as a person physically and mentally. The ride will stop, eventually. But before that I will allow myself to explore for the better.

The doors to my childhood are now locked forever.
